The indications are that this new course at the University, which opens the new academic year on September 27, will be the most popular course ever offered at this Western university.

Applications for enrolment are coming rom high school students all over the Thirteenth naval district, comprising the States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, States of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Wyoming and Alaska. The course is of four years duration and is patterned after that presented at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. Graduates will be given a degree of bachelor of science in naval science from the university and an ap-pointment as an officer in the United States Navai Reserves. If the war is ot over when these students graduate they will be sent directly into active Seven Nava! Reserve officers under Admiral Thomas will have charge of the tion of the course. Students in this course are on the same basis as any other students in the university. They must pay the same entrance and laboratory fees and must pay their own board and room. Uniforms will be supplied by the navy

The extension division is offering special course in trigonometry and logarithms, to begin September 2, bu students may enter at any time. This rourse is given in three sections, at 4. 6 and 7 o'clock, in the California development board room of the Ferry Building. Enrolments for any of these sections may be made at the university extension offices, room 330, Lick Building, 62 Post street, San Francisco, and at room 301, California Hall, University Berkeley.

The university has no official connection with the Federal Government in this work and promises the students nothing, but most of those who have mished the courses in the former series have been able to obtain ensign's commiss ons. The school has been inspected by Rear Admiral Ross of the Bureau of Navigation, in general charge of officers training in the United States Navy, and more recently by Capt. Senn of the same bureau, and has received their approval. The courses offer an opportunity for training in subjects required in the examinations for the ensign's commission given by the Navy Department after an applicant had en-rolled and has been in active service long enough for the officers of the navy to determine his personal fitness for a commission. The university will issue a certificate of recommendation to each one who completes the three courses of the preliminary training school with a thoroughly satisfactory grade.

There's an old salty saying among old salts that until a wearer of the navy blue has spilled out of his hammock and landed with a resounding thud on the deck, and until he has experienced that indefinable sensation of climbing up the rungs to the lofty crow's nest where the lookouts hold forth, he has no logical claim to be called a sailor.

There are any number of different ratings and classes of work in the navy, each requiring special skill and training, but first of all the enlisted man or the officer in the navy must know his duty as a fightling man. In other words, he is essentially a fighter and secondarily a specialist in his particular line. And so it is that no matter how expert a man may be as a mechanic, engineer or navigator, he must cover the entire ship and its operation in his scope of study and its interest.
